

La Grange regional vision

The focus for development in the vibrant and economic region of La Grange is for growth that is appropriate and applicable to the region and mutually beneficial to all.

Development recognises the unique and diverse social and cultural values of the region and the relationships that have been forged overtime and is inclusive of these values and relationships to build a resilient and prosperous regional community.

Native title and other land holding interests are recognised and factored into the economic landscape, and support for the planned development of these interests is enabled through feasibility and development of the La Grange region. The pastoral or pastoral diversification economic opportunities are equally available to native title holders to underpin their growth and capability requirements in the broader economy.

Agriculture opportunities for the La Grange are supported by the region's unique strengths and assets in water and land and the expected population growth.

The dominant pastoral industry continues to produce cattle for live export and domestic markets while expanding into agriculture. The current horticulture industry continues to escalate food production and smaller scale market gardens are planned by Bidyandanga as part of the community's expansion plan.

China and other Asia are viewed as strong markets for beef, agriculture and fresh produce and growth in these and other industries provides employment opportunities within the region.

A significant tourism industry continues to develop, associated with the strong indigenous cultural heritage and natural resources unique to the La Grange.

Existing landholders work together to progress appropriate development within the region, directing economic development to support the motivation for profitable businesses, a better quality of life and best practice in environmental management within the region of La Grange.
